Land known as The Booth Playing Field at Harrietsham

A report by the Head of Regulatory Services to Kent County Council's Regulation Committee Member Panel on Tuesday 20th March 2012.

Recommendation: I recommend that the County Council takes no further action in relation to this matter.

Local Member: Mrs. J. Whittle

Unrestricted item

Introduction

1. On 13th August 2001, the County Council received an application under section 13 of the Commons Registration Act 1965 from local resident Mr. David Pegg, on behalf of the Friends of the Booth Playing Field, ("the applicant") to register land known as the Booth Playing Field ("the application site") in the parish of Harrietsham as a new Village Green. The application site is shown on the plan attached at Appendix A to this report.
2. An objection to the application was received from the Booth and Baldwin Charity ("the landowner") and a Public Inquiry was held in April 2003. Following the Inquiry, the Inspector published his report recommending registration of the application site, with the exception of an area used as tennis courts, as a Village Green. That recommendation was endorsed by the County Council's Regulation Committee Member Panel at a meeting held on 20th May 2004 and, accordingly, the requisite entry was made on the Register of Town or Village Greens (as unit number VG238).

The High Court challenge

3. Subsequently, in December 2004, the County Council was informed by the Treasury Solicitor of an appeal, on behalf of the landowners, against the County Council's decision to register the land as a Village Green. The appeal was made on the basis that use had not taken place 'as of right' because recreational users had deferred to the regular use of the application site by the local Cricket Club during cricket season.
4. Members will recall that, prior to the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the *Redcar*¹ case, it had previously been the case that where recreational users adjusted their behaviour to fit in with the landowner's primary use of the land (for example, staying out of the way when a hay crop was being taken), such behaviour would be considered as 'deference' rather than the assertion of a right. Note, however, that the law has changed since the Redcar decision and this is no longer the case.
5. Having carefully considered the grounds of appeal, the County Council accepted that parts of the application site, comprising the cricket field and the tennis courts, were not capable of registration as a Village Green. However, the situation with regard to the remaining parts of the application site, notably a children's playground and the rough area of grass around the cricket field, was far less clear.

6. At the subsequent High Court hearing (on 24th January 2006), an Order was made ("the Order") requiring the deletion of the land registered as VG238 from the County Council's Register of Town or Village Greens. A copy of the Order is attached for reference at Appendix B and a copy of the amended Register is attached at Appendix C. It was also agreed between the parties at the time of the hearing that, whilst it was not appropriate for the cricket field and tennis courts to be registered as a Village Green, the question of the registration of the remaining areas should be remitted back to the County Council for reconsideration at a further Public Inquiry.

Further action by the County Council

7. Arrangements were therefore made for a second Public Inquiry, but it never took place because there followed, in the intervening period, two High Court decisions (in cases known as *Betterment*² and *High Peak*³) which cast doubt on the County Council's ability to reconsider the matter.
8. At the time that the Order was made, the anticipated effect of the Order was understood by the parties as being to quash the County Council's decision to register the land, with the matter being referred back to the County Council for reconsideration. Following the decisions in Betterment and High Peak, it would appear that the Court did not have the power to refer the matter back to the County Council for reconsideration at a further Inquiry. Furthermore, the formal Order issued by the High Court is worded such that it makes no reference to, and imposes no requirement upon, any further consideration of this matter by the County Council.
9. This has left the County Council in a difficult position because although it was the intention of the parties for this matter to be reconsidered at a further Public Inquiry, it would appear that the County Council has no ability to give effect to this intention on the basis of the Order as it currently stands.
10. As a result of these developments, the Inspector that had been appointed to hold the second Public Inquiry advised that, in his view, it was not appropriate for a second Public Inquiry to be held and further advice should be sought as to how the County Council should proceed.
11. The parties have been consulted regarding this turn of events. The applicant's position is that the Order should be set aside and the Village Green registration, as it existed prior to the Order, should remain. However, the landowner takes the view that it would not be appropriate for the High Court Order to be set aside on the basis that this would produce an unfair result and, in any event, only small parts of the application site would be capable of registration.

Current options for resolution

12. Counsel's advice has been sought as to how the County Council should proceed in relation to this matter. Counsel has carefully considered the matter and identified three possible options for resolution, which are set out in more detail below.

Option one: Reconsider the application as originally intended

13. The first option would be for the County Council to proceed as originally planned – i.e. to arrange a second Public Inquiry to reconsider the application in respect of Areas C and D. Area B was rejected at the first Public Inquiry and it was subsequently agreed between the parties that Area A should not have been registered as a Village Green.

14. Although this would appear to be the fairest solution, because it would give effect to what the parties intended at the time of the Order, Counsel strongly discouraged this course of action. Indeed, following the decisions in Betterment and High Peak, the Inspector himself was equally reticent to progress the matter in this manner.

15. In Counsel's view, if the County Council were to proceed as originally intended, it would have to justify its position, in any subsequent legal proceedings (e.g. a Judicial Review of the second determination), that it had the power to reconsider the application. It is not at all clear that the County Council has any such power available to it and, in fact, the decisions in Betterment and High Peak suggest otherwise. Furthermore, on the face of it, the Order only requires the deletion of the registration; reconsideration of the application was, in effect, a private arrangement between the parties which did not form part of the Order.

16. Therefore, Counsel advised that this course of action was not recommended.

Option two: Apply to the High Court to have the Order set aside

17. The second available option would be for the County Council to apply to the High Court to have the Order set aside. The effect of this would be to overturn the Court's decision so as to return to the position before the Order was made (i.e. the land would be registered as a Village Green with the exception of Area B), but a formal decision would still need to be made by the Court on the validity of the registration.

18. Applying for the Order to be set aside would, in the short term, be a logical approach, but the practical implication would be that the County Council would find itself in the position of having to defend the registration and actively support the application (i.e. fulfil the role of the applicant) because the applicant was not a formal party to the original proceedings. Counsel's view was that it would not be appropriate for the County Council to prejudice its impartiality in dealing with Village Green applications by doing this and that it would set a dangerous precedent.

19. Counsel advised that the County Council is under no legal obligation to apply for the Order to be set aside and, unless the County Council is prepared to actively support the registration, then there is little point in applying to have the Order set aside.

Option three: Take no further action

20. The final option which Counsel considered would be available to the County Council is simply to take no further action in the matter.
21. The justification for this is that, as noted above, the County Council does not appear to have any power to reconsider the application. Similarly, it is under no positive duty to take any further action to have the Order set aside and, if the County Council were to take such action, it would be placing itself in a very difficult situation in relation to preserving its impartiality.
22. If the applicant wishes to pursue the matter, there are alternative options available to him: either he can judicially review the County Council's decision to take no further action (in which case he would need to justify the position that the County Council ought to have reconsidered the application or applied for the Order to be set aside), or he can himself apply to the High Court for the Order to be set aside⁴.
23. Taking no further action is, in Counsel's view, the most equitable solution to the situation because it accurately reflects the wording of the Court Order (if not the intention) and, if the applicant remains dissatisfied with the County Council's decision, there are remedies available to him.

Conclusion

24. It is very unfortunate that, by virtue of subsequent changes in case law, the County Council has found itself in a difficult position in relation to this case. There is no clear or obvious solution to the situation and, in deciding how to proceed the County Council has very carefully had to take into account not only the interests of the applicant and the landowner, but also the risks to the County Council associated with any further decision.
25. There is general agreement that the first option (reconsidering the application as originally intended) is not a practicable solution: the Inspector responsible for arranging the second Inquiry and both Barristers involved in providing subsequent advice all agree that this course of action is to be strongly discouraged.
26. The decision to be made by the County Council is therefore whether to apply to the High Court to have the Order set aside or whether to simply take no further action. Both of these options entail a varying degree of risk to the County Council: on the one hand, a decision to do nothing may well lead to Judicial Review proceedings by the applicant, whilst a decision to apply for the Order to be set aside is likely to be strongly opposed by the landowner.
27. Applying to the High Court to have the Order set aside would be a higher risk option as the County Council would not only have to demonstrate that it is appropriate for the Order to be set aside (and it is not clear that this is the case) but it would also have to present the case on the part of the applicant, thereby prejudicing its impartiality as Commons Registration Authority. The County Council is under no duty to take such a risk.

⁴ The Civil Procedure Rules (rule 40.9) provide that a person who is not a party to proceedings but who is directly affected by an Order may apply to have that Order set aside or varied.

28. Counsel's advice to the County Council is that, on balance, the most preferable option is to take no further action. It should be noted that a decision to do nothing will not necessarily bring the matter to a conclusion because the applicant may well decide to take advantage of one of the remedies available to him. Such a decision would, however, be a step closer to bringing the matter to a close and an improvement in the current situation whereby the matter is effectively held in limbo.

29. For the reasons set out above, it is considered that the County Council should heed Counsels' advice and resolve to take no further action in relation to this matter.

Recommendation

30. I recommend that the County Council takes no further action in relation to this matter.
